

A Message from your Parish Priest

I was writing a little last week about our Catholic belief in the Communion of Saints. During the Month of November, it is this belief which prompts us to pray for those who we have loved on earth but who have been taken from us by death. We also believe that we, who are left behind, benefit from their prayers, either in Purgatory or as Saints of God in Heaven.

I have just returned from a reunion at the English College in Valladolid, Spain, where I trained for the priesthood forty years ago. The reason for our gathering was the old feast of the English Martyrs on 25th October. There can be very few places so full of memories of those martyrs as the Spanish College, which King Philip II founded the year after the failure of his great Armada, to train priests for the dangerous mission to England and Wales.

In the register of the college, dating back to its foundation, the name of every student is inscribed. In the margin, besides many of those during the first century of the college's life, a rose is drawn. It was added as news arrived in Spain of that person's death in England on the scaffold. In the same register is the entry for a student who was expelled from the college and later became one of the most notorious figures in English history, Titus Oates. It was Titus Oates who concocted a fictitious Catholic plot against King Charles II which resulted in the last great wave of persecution against the Church in our country, and the martyrdom of many priests, including the eighty-three year old Fr Nicholas Postgate, from our own county of Yorkshire.

On the day of the feast – which was transferred to mid-week, for the benefit of priests travelling from parishes at home – the Mass was begun with a procession round the corridors of the college, carrying the relics of many of those martyred priests who had studied there. The walls of those same corridors are hung with the portraits of those same priests, with details and even images of their cruel deaths. They are a unique record of a group of people forgotten by most, but whose memories are treasured by those who have studied in the same place and for the same mission, though in very different times.

Which is what reminded me of the beautiful doctrine of the Communion of Saints. We prayed to those martyrs asking for their intercession. Many of them have been canonised and beatified by the Church. We rejoiced to think that, in heaven, their prayers were being offered for a cause so dear to their hearts that they did not hesitate to give their lives for it. At the same time as our prayer united us with one another, the example of their dedication served as an inspiration to all of us who gathered together in their memory.

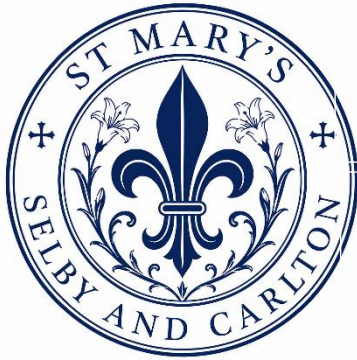

We have many kinds of bonds with others. There are bonds of blood, and of affection. There are bonds of faith and shared interests. The most wonderful bond of all, though, which the Communion of Saints reminds us of, is the bond of the children of God who exist as the Church on this earth, as the great mass of Saints in Heaven and as the Holy Souls in Purgatory, and never lose their love and care for one another.

With every blessing,

Monsignor Smith

TALKS ON THE FAITH

In every parish, there are people at different stages of the journey of faith. Since I have been in this parish I have been approached by several people, who regularly come to Mass but have never been baptised, or who have not received some of the other sacraments. I want to issue an invitation to anyone in that position to get in touch with me. My hope would be to begin a series of talks on the faith. If people understand more about the faith they may possibly wish to take a step forward on their journey, perhaps by becoming members of the Church, or by receiving any sacraments they have so far lacked. If you think this may apply to you, please email the parish office and when I have an idea of interest, we can decide how to proceed.
